These real buffalo horns have been cooked and cleaned. They are from a U.S. ranch that raises buffalo for meat.

The horns from bulls measure 11" to 13" on the outside curve and 10" to 11" in circumference at the base. The diameter across the base is approximately 3" to 4". The large bull horns are 13" to 15" on the outside curve. The horns from cows (i.e., female buffalo) measure 8" to 12" long on the outside curve. The large female horns are 12" to 18" on the outside curve. They are hollow inside except for the extreme tip, which is solid. Sold individually and in matching pairs. (Bison bison, ranch).

ARE YAK ENDANGERED?

Yak in the wild are highly protected. They are listed as CITES I animals—the most protected category that does not allow for any commercial trade. Wild yak are very rare. The species has been domesticated and is not protected if there is proof that the animal was raised on a ranch and not in the wild. The same thing applies for ostrich. They are rare in the wild, but are common on farms and ranches. We only sell products from domesticated yak or ostriches.

SORTING AND MATCHING HORNS

We frequently get requests to sort antler and horns into matching pairs. Most of these horns come to us loose (not matched). We will do our best to select closely matched antlers and horns if you wish. We charge for labor to cover the cost of sorting to find matching sets.
